Taron Egerton as Elton John in "Rocketman." PARAMOUNT PICTURES

How electrifying sound mixing and editing bring life to Elton John's story in 'Rocketman'

We spoke with director Dexter Fletcher about the film's humongous sound.

PAT KING

Fans of Elton John know that the glammed-out rocker's music changed the world, but with the release of "Rocketman," the R-rated musical starring Taron Egerton as Captain Fantastic himself, the music and sound editing in the film could change the way movies are made from this point forward.

Partnering with Dolby Atmos, the film's director Dexter Fletcher and composer Giles Martin have used sound editing in a completely new way to help Sir Elton's songs explode with life on the screen. By seeing the film in a Dolby Atmos setting, moviegoers will be able to follow Egerton as he walks out onstage, hearing each instrument mixed in its correct location onstage, and the roaring from the crowd right in front of him. In other words, while so much attention has been paid in recent films to enhancing the visual experience with 3-D technology, seeing "Rocketman" in this new Dolby surround sound will introduce audiences to a brand-new form of 3-D audio that they have never experienced.

"If you kind of look back into the history of how sound was mixed, especially for 5.1 or 7.1 to some degree, everything you were told and taught as a mixer we tell you not to do with a format like Dolby Atmos," explains Stuart Bowling, director of Content and Creative Relations at Dolby Laboratories, during a discussion at the "Rocketman" at Dolby SoHo installation in Manhattan. "An example of that would be dialogue. Dialogue in a movie is traditionally anchored on the screen. In regular cinemas, like a 5.1 or a 7.1, if you move dialogue off a screen, because there are many speakers inside a movie theater, the entire wall would illuminate with dialogue if the dialogue was panned into the surrounds. People would go 'Whoa!' It would change you out of the movie, which is traditionally a no-no. But in Dolby Atmos what we can do is, we can move dialogue off of the screen and we can isolate it down to an individual loudspeaker and it has the same frequency and timbre as the screen channels. So there is no attenuation when it moves and retains the full fidelity. But now it gives a greater offscreen performance and enhancement to the environment that the filmmaker never had before."

"The beauty of the sound and what you can do with the music and the mix and all of the instrumentation afterward when you have Giles Martin go, 'I'll just go to Abbey Road and re-record that!", which is what he goes off and does, is that you can layer that and go off and build it and extract a bigger palette than you've been playing with."

For Fletcher, having these new tools at his disposal gave him the ability to reach for the fantastical heights that the film's subject truly deserved.

"It's the beauty of where the technology is at, is that we create those moments to a track that is completely temp [existing film track], really," says Fletcher. "Sometimes Taron is singing live and we record it. Some of 'Crocodile Rock' he sings live. Some of 'I'm Still Standing,' a lot of that is live. 'Your Song,' he does. The beauty of the sound and what you can do with the music and the mix and all of the instrumentation afterward when you have Giles Martin go, 'I'll just go to Abbey Road and re-record that!", which is what he goes off and does, is that you can layer that and go off and build it and extract a bigger palette than you've been playing with. You cut and you build and you work to this temp. Because that's it, really, isn't it? It's the one thing that you can go back and layer. Then you start to mix and it's like, 'Oh my god, it's everywhere!'"

With this new audio technology, Fletcher hopes that people in the audience will feel like they are in the room as Elton is creating some of his timeless classics.

"When something like 'Your Song' happens, originally it's really simple. There's a guy sitting at the piano. Taron is singing it. But, Giles gets that and when we've done the edit and then bring the strings at a certain point and you feel that tingle on the back of your neck — that's for everyone in the audience. You know that music has that unifying quality. When the right note hits at the right time, it's kind of hard to resist or deny."

"Rocketman" hits theaters this Friday, May 31.

Summer at the museum

Here are the top art exhibitions to check out this season in Philly.

MADELINE PRESLAND

The Barnes Foundation. GETTY

Take your pick of several legendary art museums in Philadelphia. In addition to stunning permanent collections and installations, there are plenty of special exhibitions showing this summer. Here's your guide to visiting the best art exhibitions this season.

Philadelphia Museum of Art

Explore art through different mediums by iconic impressionists Claude Monet, Vincent van Gogh and Mary Cassatt in "The Impressionist's Eye." This special exhibition at Philadelphia's largest art museum has a wide range of works from popular and lesser-known Impressionists, including sculptures and works on paper as well as paintings celebrated for how they capture light, color and expression. The exhibition casts a new light on many works from the museum's renowned permanent collection, and focuses on themes shared by the artists. The exhibition runs through Aug. 18.

2600 Benjamin Franklin Parkway, philamuseum.org

Barnes Foundation

The Barnes Foundation is opening its first video art exhibition this summer. "I Do Not Know What It Is I Am Like: The Art of Bill Viola" will showcase pieces from the video artist, whose work captures death, spirituality and other essential human experiences. Viola is a celebrated video artist who started working with the medium in the 1970s. The exhibition is named after one of his longer films that sheds light on the quest for self-knowledge and fulfillment. The exhibition includes several film screening dates and additional special events to make this experience even more interactive for film lovers. The exhibition opens on June 30.

Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts

See Kensington captured in a new way during photographer Jeffrey Stockbridge's "Kensington Blues" exhibition. The images empathetically capture something Philadelphians know all too well: the opioid crisis. Stockbridge's work in this exhibition documents Kensington's struggles during a time when opioid addiction and overdoses are steadily rising. He started photographing the people and landscape of Kensington more than 10 years ago while attending Drexel University. Shot on a 4x5 film camera, the images displayed in the exhibition are part of a book by the same name. With work appearing in The New York Times Magazine, Stockbridge's photographs blur the lines between art and journalism. "Kensington Blues" runs until Sept. 15.

118-128 N. Broad St., pafa.org

Philadelphia Magic Gardens

In addition to the renowned outdoor mural visitors can walk through, Philadelphia Magic Gardens hosts exhibitions in its indoor gallery space. In the spirit of Magic Gardens founder and artist Isaiah Zagar, Philadelphia-based artist Justin Tyner creates psychedelic stained-glass works from repurposed glass found in the city. He incorporates everything from bottles to fallen stained-glass pieces from abandoned churches to form kaleidoscopic patterns that capture life and color, and to bring new life to the pieces he finds. "Light as Memory: Recollections Through Stained Glass" opens on July 12.

A STUDY OF EMERGENCY CARE INVOLVING VICTIMS OF SEVERE BRAIN TRAUMA IS TO BE PERFORMED IN THIS AREA.

Temple University Hospital, Penn Presbyterian Medical Center, Cooper University Hospital, and Jefferson University Hospital are conducting a research study to learn if either of two strategies for monitoring and treating patients with severe traumatic brain injury in the intensive care unit (ICU) is more likely to help them get better. Both of these alternative strategies are used in standard care. It is unknown if one is more effective than the other. Because head injury is a life threatening condition requiring immediate treatment, some patients will be enrolled without consent if a family member or representative cannot be rapidly available. Before the study starts, we will consult with the community. We welcome your feedback and questions.

For more information or to decline participation in this study, please visit boost3trial.org or contact our study staff at 215-707-5483.

The Manayunk Arts Festival kicks off the summer with a wide variety of unique vendors. MOLLY GIVEN

The 30th annual Manayunk Arts Festival is one of the summer's most colorful, fun and creative events, and this year promises to be better than ever. This extravaganza is the largest outdoor juried art festival in the tri-state area, and the lineup of nationally known artists and crafters is nothing short of impressive. With over 300 artists and nearly 200,000 collectors, buyers and designers, there is truly something for everyone.

The festival kicks off on Saturday, June 22, from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. and will continue through Sunday, June 23, from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. along Main Street in Manayunk. The historic street is transformed from a charming line of bars, restaurants and shops into a hub of eclectic energy, unique findings and plenty of one-of-a-kind vendors.

"The fact that the Manayunk Arts Festival is going stronger than ever after 30 years is a testament to the artists, the business community that hosts this event every year, and to the folks who visit and support the artists by purchasing their work," said Megan Douress, director of Marketing and Events for the Manayunk Development Corporation, in a release. "We're really excited for everyone visiting to see what Manayunk has to offer in our 30th year of the festival!"

Philadelphians who attend the event this June can find an interesting and wildly appealing array of knick-knacks, trinkets and more from popular artists and crafters. According to the release, the Manayunk Arts Festival will feature artists from seven different disciplines: fiber, glass and ceramics, jewelry, mixed media, painting and drawing, photography, and wood and sculpture. Also, for the seventh year in a row, local artists will be featured in the Emerging Artist Tent at the intersection of Main and Grape streets. There will be 30 artists from around the Greater Philadelphia area showcasing their work throughout the weekend.

The festival started out as a small showcase of the Manayunk area. Decades ago, this section of the city was nowhere near the hustling and bustling neighborhood that it is now.

"I think it was the catalyst," recalled Dan Neducsin, owner of Neducsin Properties and founder of the Manayunk Arts Festival. "I had vacancy signs and it really brought people here who hadn't been here or hadn't been back in a long time. It was like they were just discovering it or were rediscovering it. After that, my phone rang off the hook and everyone wanted to be in Manayunk!"

The Manayunk Arts Festival will also feature delicious food, tasty treats and refreshing beverages from some of the area's top hot spots. Plus, there will be more shopping offerings at some of the local boutiques and shops.

According to the release, the Manayunk Development Corporation also encourages taking public transportation to the event. With just a 15-minute train ride from Center City, attendees can take the Manayunk-Norristown Line to the Manayunk station all weekend. Plus, SEPTA Bus Routes 61 and 35 will be rerouted to Ridge Avenue for the weekend.

If you can't take public transportation, there will also be limited parking available at the 4000 Main St. lot and Green Lane lot (located between Main Street and Cresson Street).

This exciting event will be going on rain or shine. Find out more information about the festival at manayunk.com.

Fun summer things to do in Philly

The City of Brotherly Love is about to get way more entertaining this summer. The city comes alive with countless events and things to do under the blazing sun. Here are a few must-do activities this summer. BECCA GLASSER-BAKER

The view from one of the Parks on Tap events in Philly. ALBERT YEE FOR PHILADELPHIA PARKS AND RECREATION DEPARTMENT

Summer has finally made its way to the City of Brotherly Love. Philadelphians can leave behind the gloomy spring and finally bask in the glorious sunshine and explore everything the city has to offer. The City of Brotherly Love is full of superb things to do inside and outside this summer: From its beautiful parks to its magnificent museums, there is something for everyone to do. Here are a few different events happening around the City of Brotherly Love this summer for both adults and children.

Visit Philly's own traveling beer garden

Philly has its very own traveling beer garden! Parks on Tap brings beer to different parks throughout Philly. They provide fresh food, beer, wine, snacks and other beverages available for purchase. Through Sept. 29, Wednesday and Thursday 5-10 p.m., Friday 4-11 p.m., Saturday 1-11 p.m., Sunday 1-10 p.m., prices vary, locations vary

Roller-skate and play carnival games

This year, Philly's only outdoor roller-skating rink is about to get a lot better. For this year's Blue Cross RiverRink Summerfest, the roller-skating rink is open, and they are also bringing back a nine-hole mini-golf course, carnival games and even some rides, including a fan-favorite 60-foot Ferris wheel that gives riders a wonderful view of the Philly skyline. Through Sept. 29, Sunday-Thursday 1-10:30 p.m., Friday 1 p.m.-12:30 a.m., Saturday 11 a.m.-midnight, Sunday, 11 a.m.-10 p.m., $3-$10, 101 S. Columbus Blvd.

Check out Philadelphia's Chinese Lantern Festival

The Philadelphia Chinese Lantern Festival features around 30 different lanterns for attendees to see. Included with admission, ticketholders can attend staged performances taking place at 7:30 p.m., 9 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Food and alcohol is available for purchase as well. Through June 30, 6-11 p.m. daily (timed ticket), $12-$16, 6th and Race streets

Celebrate Flag Fest with Betsy Ross House

This summer, celebrate all things stars and stripes with the Betsy Ross House. This summer they are hosting their annual Flag Fest to celebrate National Flag Week. Through the week, visitors can learn colonial chocolate making, meet "Betsy Ross" and "George Washington," and even learn about how presidential flags are made today. June 9-14, $4-$8, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. daily (until 8 p.m. on Thursdays and the first Friday of each month), 239 Arch St.

Admire Longwood Garden's Festival of Fountains

This summer Longwood Gardens is celebrating all things color at their Festival of Fountains. Longwood Gardens is famous for its beautiful horticulture displays and, of course, its illuminating fountain shows. Get ready to see the color of summer as the fountains dance. Through Sept. 29, $12-$23, Sunday-Wednesday 9 a.m.-6 p.m., Thursday-Saturday 9 a.m.-10 p.m., 1001 Longwood Rd., Kennett Square

WEEK 17 5/27-6/2/19

Bruce Campbell talks his new hosting gig on 'Ripley's Believe it or Not'

The reboot of the famous franchise with the legendary actor will premiere Sunday, June 9 on Travel Channel. PAT KING

Ever since the debut of his legendary character Ash Williams in the Sam Raimi camp-horror classic, "The Evil Dead," actor Bruce Campbell has been an icon for all things considered "slightly off" in popular culture. Campbell will be lending his chiseled chin and infectious charisma as the new host of Travel Channel's reboot of the classic franchise "Ripley's Believe it or Not," premiering Sunday, June 9 at 9 p.m. We caught up with Campbell to talk about the show's strange yet uplifting stories and, of course, all things Ash.

Throughout your career, you've become this icon of all things that are slightly off center, in some ways. And for fans of yours, putting you as the new host of "Ripley's Believe it or Not" is kind of like a no brainer.
I think it's a good fit because these are people that we're profiling... they're not your normal next door neighbor. Each one of them has a crazy story to tell and for us, we're trying to just celebrate it, not pointing our finger at it and go "Ew," you know? There's a lot of people overcoming really crazy obstacles. Just like the character Ash [from "Evil Dead"]. I guess they have that in common.

What initially drew you to the project? Have you always been a fan of "Ripley's"?
Of course, I knew "Ripley's"! Everybody knew "Ripley's," you know. As an actor, if you are gonna host something you might as well host something that people have heard of, which is "Ripley's". And I just thought it was cool. I had some old "Ripley's" books at my house and I read a lot of books with all of these really cool, weird illustrations. And now they have a guy who does the same kind of illustrations and is still working at "Ripley's". So it is kind of cool to see it. Right?

Have you always been drawn to these strange stories?
I like human stories. I like humans overcoming tragedy. A lot of the people who we're featuring are people who have had either horrible accidents, or they were born with something that went wrong, and then it's how they deal with it. So I'm interested in that, not so much oddity for the sake of oddity. But show me someone who will overcome something, yeah, I'm for that. Just like I like my superheroes to be normal people who overcome. That's why I like Peter Parker. He was just a normal guy in Queens who got bit by a radioactive spider.

It's been over thirty years since Ash and the following. I feel like every five years or so "camp" becomes revitalized in pop culture. We just saw that at the Met Gala, as it being the main theme, and where I think people get so overloaded with how serious things are in Hollywood and on TV, and just in life in general, and it seems like you have always approached your role with a wink to the audience and a little grain of salt. Do you still find that quality to be important in approaching roles?

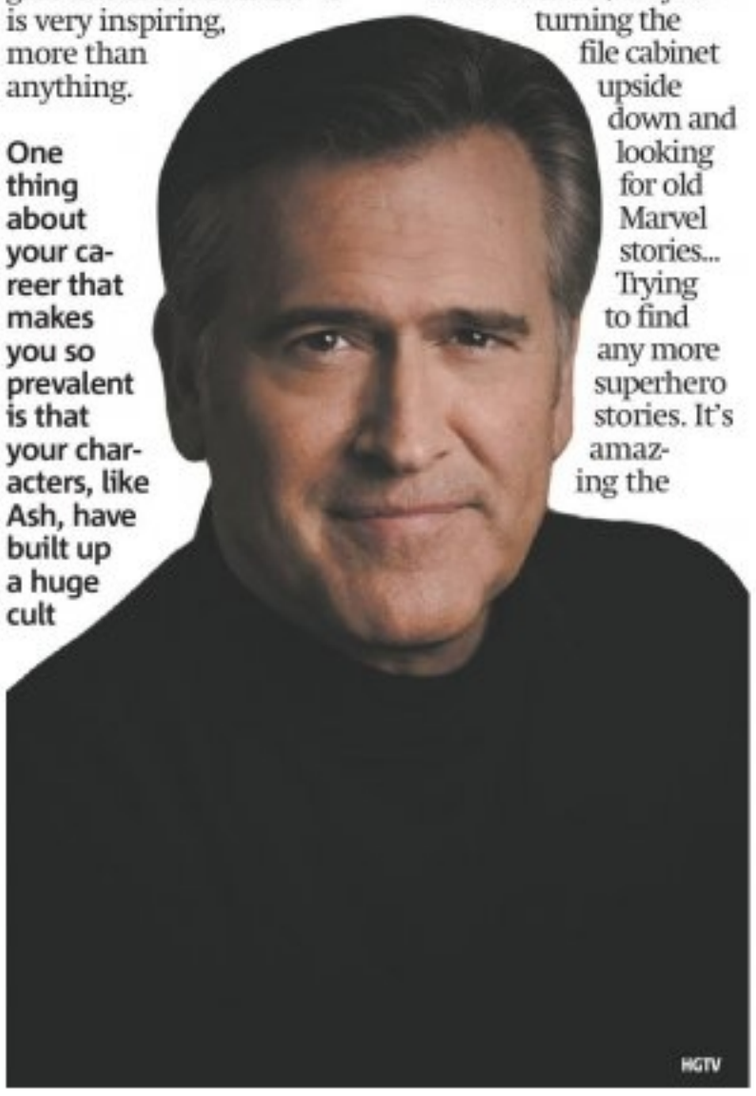
Of course. You want to be able to have people relate to you, and as a viewer, I like actors who will, my term is, "letting you in" they let you in. Some actors don't, they put up a façade and that's all you're gonna see is the façade. There's more to it, you can bring much more humanity... you know I got a high school capsule in the mail from a kid who was gonna kill himself, but then he saw a show that I did and it was life-affirming enough that he decided not to kill himself, so it's like we do have impact. You can positively impact people, not like that's my goal every morning when I wake up, but that's what [can happen]. They can actually help people rise up from a life that is undesirable...

The question now, I think, is why the fantasy movies and all these adventures and heroic movies are doing so well, because we are kind of looking for a hero right now. We need a hero. Marvel, they're turning the file cabinet upside down and looking for old Marvel stories... Trying to find any more superhero stories. It's amazing the proliferation.

People are looking for a story that is so far removed from actual life. Completely removed, and then when it's over you go, "Oh where is my Toyota Corolla parked?" In the fifth level of the parking structure, you get back to your normal life, after that. It's true, that's one purpose, I think, with Ripley's you're gonna see that people will be more encouraged and hopefully uplifted by the show, more than grossed out.

Evil Dead were first on screen, and while a lot of the people have probably visioned you as eventually playing a superhero, it's funny to see how Ash has kind of transcended that, in some ways, and has become a new kind of superhero. In some ways, he is just like Peter Parker where he is just a normal guy overcoming incredible odds. Does that legacy still amaze you?

Yeah, very much so, and I'm hoping that people can relate to in the same fashion with the show. They can look at that and go, "Man, I've got some difficulties, maybe I'll give this another shot." It is very inspiring, more than anything.



One thing about your career that makes you so prevalent is that your characters, like Ash, have built up a huge cult

Kevin Morby the searcher

ALL PHOTOS BARRETT EMIKE

We spoke with the musician about the religious imagery on his new album "Oh My God." PAT KING

Kevin Morby is looking for an answer. The Kansas City native has been creating music since the mid-2000s with such indie-rock darlings as Woods and The Babies, his band with Vivian Girls' Cassie Ramone.

But after striking out for his own solo career in 2013, he has been releasing fantastic folk-based records that have paid service to the poetry of the human condition with songs that channel the still, contemplative moments when the world is catching up to the sun.

His newest record, "Oh My God," finds Morby creating narratives using religious imagery in a way that frames concepts like "heaven" and "God" as beginnings and endings to life's journey, rather than using them to preach or inject any true judgmental fire and brimstone. For Morby, these are just universal themes of finding redemption after falling into darkness.

"For me, it's still a part of our vocabulary," explains Morby over the phone from his home in Kansas City. "I think that no matter where you're from, there's religion as a part of your environment in some way, shape or form, and certainly where I'm from it is very much a part of it. A question I get asked a lot with this record is, what other religious music do I like? Or, was I listening to a lot of religious music when I made this album? The answer is 'no' but it's also kind of 'yes' in that everything is just sort of religious. Like, everything. It's pretty hard to find something that is not talking about God in one thing to another. And so for me when I've used this vocabulary and I've used certain imagery throughout my whole career, I never thought anything of it and I never thought that it would come off as sounding like religious music or something. But people would always sort of bring it up. So I kind of made this album as a way to just get it all out on the table and have something that really follows that wordplay, but in doing so kind of show that they're just tools to tell a story."

The tone of the record is very gospel in nature, with a warm, cavernous riverbed mix of piano lead songs and a female choir assisting Morby's relaxed conversational voice as he tells stories of heartache, life and death. You get the sense that Morby spends a lot of his time pondering the questions we have never been able to answer about our existence. These are questions worth asking, and he has no problem using the language he knows to tell the story.

"There's a Leonard Cohen where he says, 'Every song is political,' and I want to agree with that," Morby says. "I mean, that's true but I also think that every song is religious in some way. And yeah, as I said, this is just a good way to kind of really explore that. It's almost one of those things where people think that, like, when it is religious, I think maybe a natural reaction for a lot of people would be to stop doing that. But I really wanted to go deeper with it."

On one of the album's standout moments, "I Want to Be Clean," Morby wonders if the only true way to be absolved from the harm you have done to others is to either accelerate toward the end of life or revert back to the purity you had once you were born. "Just to think one day we were just strangers," he sings. "Oh, how I've ruined you. And oh, how you've ruined me, too."

"Life is messy," says Morby. "You're going to have interactions on this Earth and you're going to hurt people in the process, and you're going to get hurt by people in the process. So there's really no returning to that sort of instant youth, which is what that song is sort of about.

"Like, just a feeling of — it's like a person who gets an addiction, like a drug addiction or an alcohol addiction, and then they get clean. That's a beautiful, wonderful thing, but you'll never be able to reach that point in you that was sort of before the storm. You can find this clarity after the storm in a lot of things. You're more clear-headed than you were before because you've gone through something. That song is really just about wanting to not hurt anyone or anything just by being alive. It's something that is part of the human condition."

Hitting their sweet spot

Sublime With Rome hit the stage in Philly on July 9 at the Mann Center.
MOLLY GIVEN

Sublime With Rome have always been re-identifying themselves: with different band members, new styles and songs. But now the ska punk band really seems to have found their sweet spot — and it shows. Sublime With Rome's third full-length album, "Blessings," is set to drop on May 31, and they are also touring around the country this summer with their incredibly catchy repertoire. If you thought that the band would never be quite what it was back in the '90s, good. Because they aren't. And quite frankly, they shouldn't be. Rome Ramirez, the band's guitarist and singer, sat down with Metro to talk about their new album, their tour and how the band has changed within the past decade.

First off, I want to talk about your third full-length album. What was the inspiration behind "Blessings"?
It's sort of like a summary of the last 10 years. It's kind of taking a step out of the driver's seat and looking at everything from an outward perspective and growing up in the process. There's just so much narrative there that I really wanted to capture that in the songs.

Is there a particular track that is your favorite from the new album?
Yeah, we have a new song out right now called "Light On" and that's my favorite song I've ever written, period. Then on the flip side of that, one of my other favorite songs from the record is a song called "Thank U." It's really simple, it's just the drum and vocal. Again I think the honesty and what I was trying to say with that song, it portrays really well. I have a hard time even just listening to myself without being such a hard critic, and this is just in its natural form, so I just felt like I didn't have to be uptight.

When you write, is there a certain writing process that you do, or is it different every time?
You know, it does change. When you get older, your process kind of changes and your time changes. So, obviously when your time starts to shift, how you spend it starts to shift. I think right now it's a lot easier to create when you have something to say. I'm a songwriter and producer but when I'm not writing songs for my album, I'm writing songs and producing music for plenty of other artists. So, either I would have to be the most emotional man in the world to be able to do that or I would have to find a place to be able to constantly create narratives and stories with writing and producing music in that volume.

Rome Ramirez. ALL PHOTOS GETTY

You mentioned things changing over time. Since it's almost the 10-year anniversary of Sublime With Rome, how would you say the band has progressed over the past decade?
I think we finally are really just comfortable. Onstage and in practice, it can be really difficult to have a brotherhood and then be professional — it can turn into a business. You start families and then you only see each other when you are doing business. And then sometimes a lot of bands will go through sort of that detachment when it turns into a "job." But I think we've just really mastered that sort of union. It's just a lot of fun for us.

Overall, what would you tell someone to expect at one of your concerts?
I would definitely tell people that it's an experience. That's kind of how we want everything to be. Listening to the music, we want the visuals to match. Then you go to the live show and you want the experience to be better than just listening to the songs on the album. But we definitely put an emphasis on our sounds and our visuals. It's bananas, we have this really extensive stage setup and a really radical package that updates us from the previous tour. We are continually trying to elevate and pull people in, because everybody tours and there are so many bands and artists out there trying to compete to get people to come see them live. For our fans to continually keep coming out and supporting us, we want to give them something to feel like they're watching it grow and they are getting their money's worth.

Sublime With Rome.

President Donald Trump speaks upon departure from the White House. REUTERS

President says impeachment is 'dirty, filthy, disgusting word'

Donald Trump referred to Robert Mueller as a true "never Trumper."

President Donald Trump on Thursday scornfully rejected 'disgusting' talk among Democrats about launching an impeachment inquiry against him in the aftermath of the Russia probe, saying he did nothing to merit such an outcome.

Talking to reporters on the White House South Lawn ahead of a trip to Colorado, Trump grew animated in reacting to a statement from U.S. Special Counsel Robert Mueller on Wednesday.

Mueller said his report on Russian collusion in the 2016 presidential campaign did not clear Trump of obstruction of justice and indicated it was up to Congress to decide whether he should be impeached.

Mueller's statement fueled an increase in calls from Democratic lawmakers for impeachment proceedings, and U.S. House of Representatives Speaker Nancy Pelosi, reacting to Mueller's statement, said "nothing is off the table."

Asked if he expected to be impeached, Trump said: "I don't see how ... It's a dirty, filthy, disgusting word ... It's a giant presidential harassment."

He cited the U.S. Constitution's language that a president can be charged with "high crimes and misdemeanors."

"There was no crime. There was no misdemeanor," he said.

While House Democrats have yet to decide whether to pursue impeachment, they are pressing forward with a number of investigations spinning off from the Russia probe.

The Trump administration is fighting those congressional efforts, including an attempt by the Democratic chairman of the House tax-writing panel to obtain the president's tax returns.

> "I don't see how. ... It's a dirty, filthy, disgusting word ... It's a giant presidential harassment.
> President Trump

The top Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee, Ron Wyden, said on Thursday the U.S. Treasury had been "unresponsive" to questions about Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin's decision not to comply with the House demand for Trump's returns, and he threatened to attempt to block any Treasury nominees if the department was not forthcoming.

"Congress has a constitutional obligation to conduct oversight of the executive branch," he said in a statement.

HELP FROM RUSSIA?

In a morning tweet, Trump had left the impression that he was acknowledging that Russian interference helped him win the 2016 election over Democrat Hillary Clinton. Answering questions from reporters, he later said the exact opposite.

"No, Russia did not help me get elected," he said, adding that he needed no help in winning the election.

Trump heaped scorn on Mueller, calling him "totally conflicted" in part because he had wanted to head the FBI.

"I told him NO. The next day he was named Special Counsel — A total Conflict of Interest. NICE!," Trump said on Twitter, without providing evidence that Mueller, a Republican, had sought the FBI job.

Speaking to reporters, Trump also said that Mueller is a close friend of former FBI Director James Comey, who Trump fired weeks after taking office in early 2017.

"I think Mueller is a true 'never Trumper,'" Trump said. REUTERS

Seven South Koreans dead, hope dims for missing in Budapest boat disaster

The captain of the vessel, C. Yuriy, was arrested.

A rescue boat is seen on the Danube River after a tourist boat capsized in Budapest. REUTERS

Hungarian rescue officials said there was little chance of finding survivors after a boat with South Korean tourists onboard sank on the Danube River in Budapest, with seven people confirmed dead and 21 missing.

The boat was cruising when it collided with a larger luxury passenger boat during a rainstorm on Wednesday evening, causing it to capsize and sink with 33 South Korean tourists and tour guides and two Hungarian crew aboard.

"I wouldn't say there is no hope, rather that there is a minimal chance [of finding survivors]," Pal Gyorfi, a spokesman for the Hungarian national ambulance service, told the M1 state broadcaster.

"This is not just because of the water temperature, but [also] the strong currents in the river, the vapor above the water surface, as well as the clothes worn by the people who fell in," he added.

Police said the smaller boat turned on its side and sank within seconds of the collision under a bridge near Hungary's parliament building.

They said a criminal investigation was under way to determine the cause of the accident. Police declined to say if the bigger vessel, the 443-foot Viking Sigyn, put out any signals for help.

Police said their investigation yielded evidence that raised personal responsibility, so they questioned the Viking Sigyn captain, a 64-year-old Ukrainian, as a suspect, and later moved to take him into custody for reckless misconduct in waterborne traffic leading to mass casualties.

Police said they had initiated the formal arrest of the captain, identified as C. Yuriy from Odessa.

Officials said the hull of the Mermaid, an 89-foot double-decker river cruise boat, had been found on the riverbed a few hundred meters from its usual mooring point.

A crane ship docked near the wreck on Thursday in preparation for recovery operations and divers prepared equipment. Police said the rescue efforts were hampered by high water levels, strong currents and bad visibility.

"Those who were trapped in the hull or were stuck underneath can be lifted only once the wreckage is pulled out," a police statement said.

Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orban offered his condolences to Seoul. South Korean President Moon Jae-in said the authorities would work with the Hungarian government to investigate the cause of the accident.

"What's most important is speed," Moon said in Seoul.

Some South Korean relatives of those onboard started to depart for Hungary. Several family members were seen at Incheon International Airport in Seoul on Thursday night.

South Korean rescue teams and officials including South Korean Foreign Minister Kang Kyung-wha also left for Budapest on Thursday. She will hold a news conference with Hungarian Foreign Minister Peter Szijjarto Friday morning.

Philadelphia sees yet another evening of epic weather

The city's Thursday evening commute was marred by severe weather that brought rain and winds to the area for the third night in a row.

According to the National Weather Service, Philadelphia was expected to see as much as a half inch of rain as well as hail, gusty winds, and heavy rain. At least the city didn't have to deal with a chill — temperatures held steady in the high 70s. The worst of the thunderstorms were expected to hit Philly before 3 a.m., the NWS forecast, with rain showers continuing through the early morning.

The region's wonky weather started on Tuesday, with a tornadoes touching down in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Even New York City dealt with tornado warnings this week. Fortunately, a break is in sight on Friday and Saturday, with skies expected to clear and typical spring weather due across the tri-state area... until Saturday night, that is.

Philly weather through Sunday night:

Friday: Mostly sunny, with a high near 83. West wind around 8 mph.

Friday Night: Mostly clear, with a low around 63. West wind around 6 mph becoming calm in the evening.

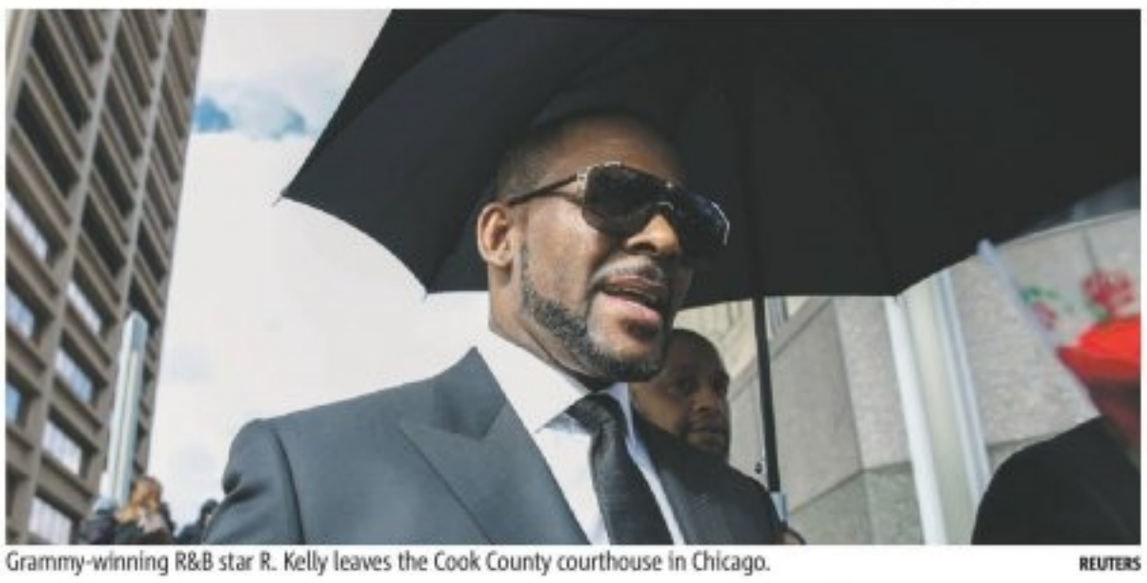
11 More charges dropped on R. Kelly

New felony sex assault and abuse charges were filed against the singer.



Grammy-winning R&B star R. Kelly leaves the Cook County courthouse in Chicago. REUTERS

Grammy-winning singer R. Kelly was charged on Thursday with 11 new felony counts of sexual assault and abuse that could, if he is convicted, send the R & B singer to prison for 30 years, the Chicago Sun-Times reported.

Kelly was indicted by a Cook County Grand Jury on four counts of aggravated criminal sexual assault, two counts of criminal sexual assault by force and two counts of aggravated criminal sexual abuse, documents posted on the newspaper's website showed.

He was also indicted on three counts of aggravated criminal sexual abuse against a victim between the ages of 13 to 16, according to the documents. The allegations center on someone identified only as "J.P." in January 2010, with no other details provided.

Kelly's attorney Steve Greenberg was not immediately available for comment. Kelly has denied abuse allegations for decades. In 2008, the singer was tried on child pornography charges and found not guilty.

Kelly, 52, pleaded not guilty in February to charges that he sexually assaulted three teenage girls and a fourth woman. The charges were brought after seven women, including his ex-wife, appeared on a Lifetime television documentary and accused him of emotional and sexual abuse.

He spent a weekend in jail on the sex charges before being released on $100,000 bail on Feb. 25.

The new charges carry a sentence of 30 years for Kelly if he is convicted, the Sun-Times reported. REUTERS

Probable No. 1 NBA pick Zion Williamson signs with CAA

REUTERS

Projected No. 1 draft pick Zion Williamson will be represented by CAA Sports.

The agency announced their partnership with Williamson, who played one season at Duke, on Thursday.

ESPN's Adrian Wojnarowski reported that CAA basketball agent Austin Brown and executive Lisa Joseph-Metelus will represent Williamson. CAA will be charged with navigating Williamson through various endorsement deals, including what is expected to be one of the largest shoe contracts ever.

"In my lifetime, I think it's going to be the biggest bidding war ever done," Sonny Vaccaro, a former marketing executive with Nike, Adidas and Reebok, told ESPN last month. "I would put them all on go."

With CAA, Brown represents a number of NBA players, including Brooklyn Nets guard D'Angelo Russell. Brown played college basketball at DePauw.

Joseph-Metelus worked with recently retired Dwyane Wade during his career.

Williamson was the NCAA Player of the Year. The New Orleans Pelicans are expected to select him with the No. 1 overall pick of the June 20 draft.

In the 2018-19 season, the 6-foot-7 forward played in 33 games for the Blue Devils, averaging 22.6 points and 8.9 rebounds per game while shooting 68 percent from the field. REUTERS

This could very well be the biggest sports betting weekend until college football kicks off in late August, as the NBA and NHL seasons are set to wrap up.

DraftKings Sportsbook is offering several odds boosts for the NBA Finals and Stanley Cup Final as well as some Phillies props for this jam-packed sports weekend.

To take advantage of DraftKings offers and claim a free bet up to $200 through MetroBet, go to:

tinyurl.com/y5fdl9lt

On Friday, DraftKings will offer a Champions League Final prop on Harry Kane to score a goal on a header ahead of Saturday's clash between Tottenham and Liverpool.

Saturday features DraftKings' "MLB Madness" offerings with a boost on a four-leg moneyline parlay that includes the Phillies, Padres, Astros and Mets all to win. DK will also have Stanley Cup Final Game 3 boosts for you to check out.

And the weekend will conclude with Game 2 of the NBA Finals between the Raptors and Warriors on Sunday night. DraftKings Sportsbook will dish out odds boosts on the first Toronto player to score 20 points, as well as for Kawhi Leonard to score the first field goal.

VSiN Nuggets

A dramatic bounce back from the Blues Wednesday in the Stanley Cup Final showed why so many bettors consider using the "zig zag" theory in playoff betting.

The pre-series underdog was badly outclassed by the Bruins in Monday's series opener, getting outshot 38-20, and losing the analytic stat "expected goals" by a wide 3.83 to 1.24 margin, according to hockey website Natural Stat Trick.

In Wednesday's rematch?

*St. Louis virtually reversed shot count, winning the stat 37-23.

*St. Louis won "high danger scoring chances" 15-10, after dropping that important indicator stat 10-3 in the opener. The Blues were getting the best of "flow of play" all evening, not getting discouraged when they could only forge a tie through three periods.

*St. Louis won "expected goals" 2.88 to 1.86 — more than a full goal better than Boston, despite having to play on the road.

Phillies, MLB betting previews

Phillies at Dodgers

Jake Arrieta (5-4, 3.60 ERA) and the Phillies should steal a win on the road against Kenta Maeda (6-2, 3.67 ERA) and the Dodgers when they open a three-game series at Dodger Stadium on Friday night.

Arrieta is fresh off a sharp eight-inning outing against the Brewers on May 25, allowing just two runs on five hits and a walk while striking out eight. In his last four starts against L.A., Arrieta is 2-1 with a 2.08 ERA and opponent batting average of .198 (26 innings). NL MVP frontrunner Cody Bellinger is hitless in four prior at-bats against the Missouri native.

Maeda is 3-1 in his six most recent starts against the Phillies but has pitched to a 4.55 ERA. His batting average against is .230 in 29-2/3 innings of work. Philadelphia's revitalized 2019 lineup will get its first taste of Maeda this season. Shortstop Jean Segura, catcher J.T. Realmuto and outfielder Andrew McCutchen are a combined 13-for-37 (.351) against the Japan native all-time.

The play: Phillies +140

Brewers at Pirates

Two struggling starters will take the hill at PNC Park on Friday as the Brewers' Jhoulys Chacin (3-6, 4.88 ERA) squares off with the Pirates' Chris Archer (1-5, 5.75 ERA). Bettors should be looking for plenty of runs to come across. Chacin has a 5.90 ERA (.274 batting average against) in six road starts this year and a 4.97 road ERA (.262 batting average against) in the past three seasons. In his last seven starts against the Pirates, Chacin is 0-3 with a 3.35 ERA and an opponent batting average of .237 (37 2/3 innings). Pittsburgh's offense, led by dangerous first baseman Josh Bell (1.287 OPS in May), is seventh in baseball in batting average over the last two weeks.

Archer has an 8.56 ERA in three starts following an IL stint for thumb inflammation in his throwing hand. In his last three efforts against the Brewers, Archer is 0-2 with a 6.60 ERA and opponent batting average of .271 (15 innings).

The play: Brewers vs. Pirates Over

Bullpen injuries could force Phillies to market this summer

The Phillies have seven relievers on the shelf.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Former Phillie Ken Giles could be a trade target to strengthen Philadelphia's depleted bullpen. GETTY IMAGES

A strong start for the Philadelphia Phillies has them sitting atop the National League East after the first two months of the 2019 season.

With a series victory over the St. Louis Cardinals ensuring they remained at least 10 games over .500, the division is developing into a two-horse race alongside the Atlanta Braves.

Even with the top spot in hand, some underlying problems could sabotage Philadelphia's pursuit of a third World Series title.

The health of the Phillies bullpen continues to plummet this season, which says a lot about their depth considering they rank 10th in the majors and best in the NL East with a 4.01 ERA.

Yet healthy arms are at a premium, especially after another difficult week.

Right-hander Victor Arano, who has been sidelined since April with right-elbow inflammation, underwent arthroscopic surgery on Wednesday. There is no timetable for his return as of yet.

On the very same day, Adam Morgan was placed on the 10-day injured list due to a left forearm strain. The 29-year-old was enjoying his best season in the majors so far, posting a 1.96 ERA with 18 strikeouts in 24 appearances.

Morgan joins an already crowded list of Phillies relievers on the shelf that includes Arano, David Robertson, Pat Neshek, Edubray Ramos, and Tommy Hunter. That's basically an entire MLB-caliber bullpen sidelined.

None of those names seem close to returning either as there are no rehabilitation assignments known of yet.

It means that the Phillies are going to have to explore all avenues for bullpen help, including the MLB Draft from Jun. 3-5.

Elsewhere, the Phillies are going to be an overwhelming presence on both the free-agent and trade market for the time being.

That still doesn't mean, however, that veteran closer Craig Kimbrel will be an option for Philadelphia. The 31-year-old is still likely in search of a multi-year deal, which could be an investment too large for the Phillies.

Kimbrel is expected to sign quickly after the draft when the possibility of pick compensation is off the table.

It means general manager Matt Klentak's best option of getting relief help will likely come via trade. Though he may be forced to play a dangerous waiting game as the MLB trade deadline is not until the end of July.

Regardless, some teams are already out of the race in 2019, which could provide Klentak with some earlier trade targets to replenish the bullpen depth.

The San Francisco Giants, already 15 games out of first in the NL West, have a trio of intriguing arms in Will Smith, Sam Dyson, and Tony Watson that could be used to help spark a rebuild in the Bay Area.

The Detroit Tigers, 15.5 games out in the AL Central, can dangle veteran righty Shane Greene out on the market. The 30-year-old has a 1.13 ERA through 24 appearances this season.

Ken Giles, a former Phillies draft pick who spent his first two MLB seasons with the club from 2014-15, also might be made available by the Toronto Blue Jays.

Giles posted a 1.56 ERA during his time with the Phillies but was unable to put it all together with the Houston Astros before moving to Toronto. In 22 appearances this year, however, he has a 1.25 ERA with 34 strikeouts in just 21.2 innings of work.

Houston fire sale to benefit Sixers soon?

The Rockets are ready to break things up this summer.

joseph.pantorno@metro.us

If the NBA offseason wasn't going to be wild enough with the drama that comes with a loaded free-agent class, the Houston Rockets provided some more fuel to the fire.

ESPN's Adrian Wojnarowski reported on Wednesday that Rockets general manager Daryl Morey "is showing an aggressive desire to improve the roster with all players and picks available in talks."

Well, most likely all players other than MVP candidate James Harden, who will be the centerpiece of the organization for years to come.

Still, that means that some big names are about to hit the market like future Hall-of-Fame point guard Chris Paul — who could still bring in a big return at 34 — and the ever-improving center Clint Capela.

Despite the Rockets obtaining a fifth 50-win season in the last six years, they've been unable to get out of the Western Conference which is prompting such drastic changes.

It's a situation that the Philadelphia 76ers should be keeping tabs on with big changes possibly heading their way, too.

The 76ers have several big-name free agents heading to market this offseason, including three members of their starting five in Jimmy Butler, Tobias Harris, and JJ Redick.

Butler and Harris will be priorities to retain after the 76ers gave up numerous assets to acquire them in trades throughout the season. Seeing either of them walk would provide a sizable blow.

However, with the team's depth drained from those two big deals, the 76ers are poised to spend a lot of money to retain two names. It would make replenishing that depth that much more difficult with funds set to be so low.

That means trading for a player like Houston's Eric Gordon — who would be an attractive talent to help stretch the floor for Philadelphia's offense — is off the table seeing as the veteran guard is set to make $14 million next year.

One of the most intriguing names that could be made available by the Rockets is veteran forward PJ Tucker, who would provide an invaluable bench piece for the 76ers.

The 33-year-old is one of the more versatile players in the league, logging minutes as a shooting guard, small forward, and power forward.

This is a player who can stretch the floor, coming off a season in which he shot 37.7-percent from three-point range. Yet, he can also stabilize the backcourt with legitimate offensive talent off the bench if the 76ers want to run a smaller, quicker second unit.

He's also significantly cheaper compared to Gordon as he's owed $8.3 million next season and $7.9 million the season after.

Tucker is the only legitimate trade option the 76ers could look at for the time being. Other notable names like Gerald Green, Iman Shumpert, and Austin Rivers will be free agents this summer.

YOU MAY BE ABLE TO PREVENT THIS SHERIFF'S SALE

To prevent this Sheriff's Sale you must take immediate action:

1. The sale will be cancelled if you pay back to Nationstar Mortgage LLC d/b/a Mr. Cooper the amount of the judgment plus costs or the back payments, late charges, costs, and reasonable attorneys fees due. To find out how much you must pay, you may call: (610) 278-6800.
2. You may be able to stop the sale by filing a petition asking the Court to strike or open the judgment, if the judgment was improperly entered. You may also ask the Court to postpone the sale for good cause.
3. You may be able to stop the sale through other legal proceedings.
4. You may need an attorney to assert your rights. The sooner you contact one, the more chance you will have of stopping the sale. (See notice on page two of how to obtain an attorney.)

YOU MAY STILL BE ABLE TO SAVE YOUR PROPERTY AND YOU HAVE OTHER RIGHTS EVEN IF THE SHERIFF'S SALE DOES TAKE PLACE.

5. If the Sheriff's Sale is not stopped, your property will be sold to the highest bidder. You may find out the price bid by calling (610) 278-6800.
6. You may be able to petition the Court to set aside the sale if the bid price was grossly inadequate compared to the value of your property.
7. The sale will go through only if the buyer pays the Sheriff the full amount due in the sale. To find out if this has happened you may call 215-348-6138.
8. If the amount due from the buyer is not paid to the Sheriff, you will remain the owner of the property as if the sale never happened.
9. You have a right to remain in the property until the full amount due is paid to the Sheriff and the Sheriff gives a deed to the buyer. At that time, the buyer may bring legal proceedings to evict you.
10. You may be entitled to a share of the money, which was paid for your house. A schedule of distribution of the money bid for your house will be filed by the Sheriff no later than thirty days after the Sheriff Sale. This schedule will state who will be receiving the money. The money will be paid out in accordance with this schedule unless exceptions (reasons why the proposed distribution is wrong) are filed with the Sheriff within ten (10) days after the date of filing of said schedule.
11. You may also have other rights and defenses or ways of getting your house back, if you act immediately after the sale.
